

Each piece that is displayed on the 'Witness blanket' wall shows a powerful message, with a sad story behind it. It made me feel very emotional and my heart filled with grief and sadness to think about all those children who had to go to residential schools and could never return to their homes. We can never forget this happened in our history and we all need to learn from the terrible choices that were made in the past, but still impact the present and future. We need to move forward in the right direction for a collaborative future that includes the diversity of all people within. –Mariko-
