Reimagining Justice Exhibition: Art, Law, and Social Change

March 4-8, 2019 | 12:30-1:30
Dispute Resolution Room (150), Fraser Building

Explore the role that art can play in legal education.

For one week, the UVic law moot courtroom has been transformed into an interactive art installation showcasing the relationship between art, law, and social justice.

The exhibit displays a snapshot of creative projects submitted as alternative assessment in courses such as Business Associations (Bizazz), Family Law, and Sexual Orientation and the Law (Sex O).

The following dynamic and interactive sessions aim to challenge audiences to think about how attentive listening and embodied practices might help us create new “laws,” as we navigate our way to a more just and equitable future.

- Tuesday, March 5, 12:30-1:30—Law and Theatre—Lawyers on Stage Theatre (LOST) Board members and some of the cast from the 2018 production of Treasure Island will discuss the relationship between law and theatre.
- Wednesday, March 6, 12:30-1:30—Law and Dance—UVic Law students, including Kristen Lewis, will showcase an improvised dance exploring the relationship between written and unwritten laws/norms.
- Thursday, March 7, 12:30-1:30—Indigenous Law and the Arts—Professors Rebecca Johnson and Sarah Morales will discuss their involvement in Testify: Indigenous Laws and the Arts (Legacy Gallery) and the importance of collaboration between academics and Indigenous artists.
- Friday, March 8, 12:30-1:30—Law, Art and Pedagogy—Professors Gillian Calder and Rebecca Johnson will discuss the use and importance of arts-based pedagogies in teaching and assessment in legal education.

Educators/Creative Facilitators: Gillian Calder, Rebecca Johnson, Sarah Morales, and Sara Ramshaw

Curator: Lorinda Fraser, MSc

Special thanks to: Arta Johnson, the folks at Idea Fest, and all the students whose creative projects have nourished our senses of justice over the years
